

AIRPLANE TRIPS FROM ENGLAND TO AMERICA FEASIBLE, BIRDMAN SAYS

London, May 20.—(Correspondence of The Associated Press).—Airplane trips from England to America are quite feasible by use of a machine traveling day and night at the rate of 100 miles an hour, declared F. Handley Page, inventor of a type of machine named for him, in a recent statement to the representative of the Daily Express.

"I have received a cablegram from Canada congratulating me on the construction of a machine to travel to and from America," continued the inventor, "but I have no such machine on hand."

"The trip would be from Ireland to New York, via Newfoundland, being 1,700 miles. An alternative journey to America would be via the Azores. On the steady 100-miles-an-hour basis you can compute all the long distance runs that occur to you, including week-end trips to China and Peru."

"For short distances, such as London to Manchester, I am not inclined to think that airplanes will take the places of railways unless in case of pressing urgency. A comfortable first-class carriage of a fast train will continue to be a more usual course of travel. The airplane has a great advantage of speed, but it has severe handicaps in the way of wind and fog and other adverse climatic conditions."

"I do not think that after the war wealthy men will give up private motor cars. Few people can afford private yachts and a pleasure airplane would be as expensive as a yacht."

"There is no such thing as perpetual safety in the air, and this is bound to have an effect on the average man. I am speaking, of course, of the immediate future only. In the long results of time there are infinite possibilities in the evolution of aviation."

"There is an immense future for aircraft as aids to the world's prosperity, but what I call the tourist idea of 'round the world in forty hours' leads nowhere and means nothing."

"In the course of time bigger machines will be built with more powerful engines to direct them, but I can see no immediate prospect of turning out airplanes that will carry as many passengers as ocean liners. We must continue to beware of hot air in airplane prophecies."

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and for years it was supposed to be incurable. Doctors prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure by local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Catarrh is a local disease, greatly influenced by constitutional conditions, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is a constitutional remedy, is taken internally and acts through the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system. One Hundred Dollars reward is offered for any case that Hall's Catarrh Cure fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Hall's Family Pills for constipation.
